Specification

The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: on page 6, line 9, "vale" should be corrected as --- valve ---.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claims 3 and 4 lack sufficient structure for the functional language of "the finish process."

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jansen [US 20030168619] in view of Umemoto et al. [US 6,420,949].

Regarding claims 1-4, Jansen discloses an electromagnetic drive having a stator body [figure 3] comprising:

- a core portion [12]

- a yoke portion [106] serially arranged in axial alignment with a non-magnetic portion [110] placed therebetween;

- a plunger [88] slidably received in an inner bore formed in at least one of the yoke portion and the core portion in the stator body and resiliently urged in one direction [paragraph 37]; and

- an electromagnetic coil [100] for exciting the stator body to move the plunger in the axial direction thereof against the resilient force.

Jansen discloses everything claimed except the stator yoke, core and non-magnetic portions being formed of plate members joined together by prominent portions thereof engaging corresponding hollow portions formed thereby.

Umemoto et al. disclose a core assembly [figure 5] for a valve formed of a plurality of plate members [figure 5] joined together by prominent portions thereof engaging corresponding hollow portions formed thereby [figures 6a-c] including non-magnetic plate portions [11, 12] therebetween.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the plate assembly design of Umemoto et al. for the stator structure of Jansen, in order to facilitate assembly and accommodate different types of actuators.

Regarding claim 5, Jansen, as modified, discloses the claimed invention except for the specific shape of the prominent portion. It would have been an obvious matter of design choice to use an arc shape instead of the v-shape shown by Umemoto et al., since such a modification would have involved a mere change in the size of a component. A change in size is generally recognized as being within the level of ordinary skill in the art. In re Rose, 105 USPQ 237 (CCPA 1955).
